INTRODUCTION

During the conservative 90's when business process automation and enterprise resource planning was not considered a value driver rather treated as a cost for doing business, a few far sighted technologists envisioned a time when enterprise business application technology would be considered core to an enterprise's business strategy. Keeping this goal in mind, a technology platform was conceptually designed, developed and built with the aim of meeting and exceeding the strategic requirements of enterprises.

Within a short period of time, this platform gained acceptance from a wide spectrum of enterprise customers across industry sectors and organization sizes. Branded as APT – Application Process Technology, it enables collaborative work making people and organizations more efficient and effective, increasing business insight and consequently the strategic momentum needed for an enterprise to stay ahead.

APT provides an integrated view of core enterprise business processes, usually in real-time while also facilitating information flow between business functions and key external stakeholders. Built using leading edge technology, APT can provide significant results through self-service access to critical information for faster decision making. APT ERP solutions can be deployed in any organization regardless of size – from small and mid-market to large enterprises.
